

HUMAN RESOURCES AND ADMINISTRATION ALIGNMENT

The impact of “Organization Strategy”: When undergoing significant change, the necessary skills and the capacity of executive leadership to accomplish strategic challenges ahead is a critical issue. Other challenges are the requirement of skills that the organization does not have in-house or the lack of available time from high performing employees. Some strategic initiatives require bringing in highly experienced skills for transition, major change or projects. Once completed, existing management can take over.

These challenges are encountered by all organizations; new ERP systems, national to global growth, outsourcing, merger and divestiture, private to public to name a few. An example found in small and mid-market organizations is the ERP implementation which requires significant project management, close interaction with the business and a huge dedication of time by everyone. Hiring staff to meet this challenge provides significant risk, a potentially wrong selection, pre and post-implementation turnover or costly resources overmatched to the new environment..

The only truly sustainable strategic advantage any organization can possess is its human capital and a high performing culture.

Needed: an organizational strategy that is aligned with the business goals which provides:

- The right skills and capacities to meet changing strategic requirements.
- A business culture that attracts and retains the right staff at the right time.
- Extended resources to augment and provide a broad spectrum of assistance to maximize the efforts of existing staff and buffer the impact of significant change.
